GREENWICH HOSPITAL IN AN UPRDAR.

A circumstance of a curious nature took place a Greenwich Hospital on the 4th inft. A sum of 20 guineas has long been paid out of the Treasury of the faid Hospital, five times a-year to defray the laid Holpital, her times a year to delray the expences of disners, &c. for the officers, on the five following festivals, viz. on the accession, coronation, the birth day of their Majesties, and the day of the coronation of King William and Queen Mary, the Royal Founders of this Holpital. This sum was formerly found to be more than the commissioned officers could conveniently spend upon such occasions. A part therefore had from time immemorial been disposed of among the non-commissioned officers, by presenting each with a bottle of wine on those days of fellivity. But the commissioned officers having lately invited fo many of their friends to partake of this good cheer, that the above fum was found to be too fmall to defray the expence of their own table; they therefore gave an order on the late birth day, they therefore gave an order on the late birth day, to discontinue the custom of bottling the noncommissioned officers, or, as they were pleased to phrase it, Gentry. This caused a general consustion, the cook, barber, and messenger particularly resented this treatment, and each resused to act in his department, until the usual terms were complied with; however, they were at last prevailed upon to return to their respective employments, but with reluctance, resentment, and ill humour. The cook boiled the turbot to rage; the barber half-shaved the officers; and the messenger broke all the glasses and china that came in his way. The old women complained that some of them had been knocked down; and the young ladies infilted upon shaving the commissioned officers over again, which with some deficulty they effected. This business is likely to turn out very feriously, and probably will be fettled by the Lords of the Admiralty, who it is supposed will conclude that the commissioned officers have no right to give away what is not properly their own.

On Monday the people at Lord Sydney's office were very much alarmed by the appearance of a foreigner, in a Turkish habit, who came there and demanded money to take him (as he faid) to his own country. Mr Nepean and Mr Polloch, to whom he made his application, not thinking it proper to comply therewith, he burft out in a violent palion, and, in broken accents, called them dams'd regues and thieves, and pulling a dagger from his bosom, swore he would destroy himself. Mr Nepean and Mr Pollock, terrified at the man's behaviour, withdrew themselves into their own room, and locked the door. A messenger was dispatched to Sir Sampson Wright's office for two of his men, who came, and having cautiously wrested the dagger out of his hand, having cautioully wrelted the dagger out of his hand, he was fecured from any danger of mischies, and af-terwards conducted to Tothill-fields Bridewell, for examination before a Magistrate.

Mrs Mahon, commonly called the Bird of Paradije, who is one of those wretched beings that flatter about this town, and have only a temporary exidence, was seen yelterday in a phaeton, with her paramour; and on her countenance bore ftrong and visible marks of decay and inward remorfe. The fare of this miferable woman will ferve as a leffon to many of our fair country-women, and teach them that neither birth nor fortune will secure the respect of the world, unless their conduct be marked with that necessary ornament of the semale character,

Wednesday Captain Buchanan, of the Ranger packet, took leave of the Court of Directors of the packet, took leave of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, previous to his departure for Bengal.—The above packet, it is faid, will not be disparched within a fortnight.

The following account of the shipping in the river of Canton belonging to European powers, on the commencement of the present year 1787, as copied from the East India Company's dispatches, received by the Ranger, Captain Ellitton, is the best proof of the operation of the Commutation Tea bill, brought in by Mr Pitt, and past in the year 1784, that any thing that has hitherto been said or wrote in desence of it, as saets are of all things the most in defence of it, as facts are of all things the most stubborn, according to the old adage, Magna off veritar of prevalebit.

At the conclusion of this account is the following " From the acknowledged superiority of our trafhe to the Chinese Empire over every other nation whatever, which is now become conspicuous, there is no longer a doubt but that the Commercial Privileges, to long withed and fought for by the Com-pany, will now very specifile be obtained. A com-mission for that purpose is now at Pekin, the resi-dence of the Emperor and his Court, and from the powerful manner in which it is feconded from Europe, there is little doubt of fuecels."

KINC's BENCH.

Wednelday, Mr Wilkins produced all affidavit made by himfelf, drawn up with modelly and good fenfe, wherein he stated that he was deluded by Lord George Gotdon to print the paper in questions that he had never disposed of any of them s that at the time is was printed, he really did not consider it to contain any thing obnoxious to Government; and that he had suffered already in his circumstances to a considerable amount, as his creditors, under an apprehension of the dangerous structure, under an apprehension of the dangerous structure in which he stood, had suddenly called upon him for payment of their bills, &c. The Court seemed to listen with attention; after which Mr Justice Ashhurst expaniated for a few minutes upon the dangerous tendency of such publications; and that for the peace, good order, and tranquillity of society, it was necessary, however severe it might fall upon individuals, to punish the offenders. The judge then passed the sentence of the Court, That he he imprisend two years in the good of Newgate. in the goal of Newgate.

WEST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

From the King for (Jamaica) General Advertifer.

St Jugo de la Vega, March 22. We learn, by American papers of late date, that the United States are far from enjoying that tranquillity on which they once fo fondly plumed themfelves:

No fooner is one infurrection quelled, and the small bodies of militia dispersed, which have been called out on the occasion, than another disturbance of still more alarming nature is heard of. Several bodies of men, to the amount of twelve or thirteen hundred are in force in and near Maffachusent's, who acknowledge no mafter but their own will, and bid fair in a fhort time to become objects of the most ferious apprehension to the feederal government. Almost every congressional decree appears to be treated with marked contempt, and their boasted power a mere reed shaken with the wind.

feem to be deffined to ruin America! One stamp-act separated the Thirteen Provinces from Great Britain, and another is likely to separate them from each other!

We are informed, that the schooner St Andreas, prain Van Assendelse, sailed about three months ago from the Mulquito thore, with a number of male and female paffengers on board for this ifland; but, being overtaken by a heavy gale of wind, in which the schooler lost her masts, rigging, and sails,—Captain Van Assendelst was obliged to bear away for Carthagena, after keeping the sea for several weeks, and exhaulting almost his whole stock of provisions, where he arrived in the grettest distress; and immediately made known his helpless firuation to the officers of the Spanish government, whom he satisfied as to the truth of his relation; upon which the vicercy of the kingdom of Santa Fee, 'Don Ca-villiero, who was then at Carthagena, with lingular humanity, gave orders that the veffels should be completely manned and victualled out of the King's completely manned and victualled out of the King's flores; and that the passengers should be entertained in apartments belonging to his own palace, and his orders were strictly complied with. When the vessel was once more ready for sea, Captain Assendest waited upon the Viceroy, and offered him bills upon this island, to defray the expence of her repairs; but the noble Spaniard, with unexampled are; but the none apparatus, whitever, agnanimity, refused any compensation whatever, y saying, in substance,—" that he could not accept any pecuniary acknowledgment; for it was sufficient (to be relieved) that any stranger came to cient Carrhagena in diffress, and he was fure his Royal Mafter would highly approve of his conduct on fuch Kingflon, March 17. Captain Leary, of the Nancy, from the Mulquito Shore, has brought dif-patches from his Flonour the Lichtenant Governor; and reports that many of the inhabitants had quitted that place, 30 of whom he had landed at the Grand Caymanas. At the time of the Nanthe Grand Caymanas. At the Spanish ship of 20 guns, had failed for Cape Gracios a Dios. The Camilla, and a Spanish 40 gun ship, were at Black King flon, April 27. We have accounts from the Mosquito thore, of indisputable authenticity, that the native Indians lately held a grand council of We have accounts from the whole nation able to bear arms, in which it was unanimously determined to oppose the Spaniards in every attempt they may make hereafter to establish themselves in that territory, until the present posfessors are exterminated. After the Council had finished this very interesting business, the Commander in Chief of the Savages, whose name is Briton, set up the British standard, and placing his right hand up the Britis standard, and placing his right hand upon the slag-staff, faid, with folenin energy, "Thefe are the colours under which I will live and die; and if any of my people should be so pusilsanimous as to submit to the Spaniards by striking them, I will put him to instant death; for I am fully resolved that the Spanish slag shall never sly upon this staff while I am alive to oppose it." His people were all under arms during this awful corresponding which there I am alive to oppose it." His people were all un-der arms during this awful ceremony, which they concluded by firing three vollies of small arms. The Mulquito Indians are amply supplied with arms and ammunition; and before our advices left the country, had fent their wives and children into naccessible fastnesses in the mountains.

In confequence of the hostile result of the line Indian Council on the Musquito shore, the second in command among these warkke savages, who is called General Thomas Lee, sent a messenger express to Truxillo, to return a superb sword that had been presented to him by the Spanish Commandant of that lace; at the same time he defired the donor to understand, that he disdained to use a Spanish sword against him or his countrymen, for he had plenty of better weapons, which were left him by his brethren the English.

AMERICA. Philadelphia, May 9. Caprain George Curwin had represented to the public a scene of the most complicated calamity. The ship, Prince Frederick, Captain Richard Days, in which he took refuge, after being compelled to abandon the Congress heavy ftorm, was likewife reduced to a wreck by fucceeding gale, and the unfortunate crews of both vessels, amounting to 48 men, were driven for the fpace of three days in a long-boat and a yawl, upor the wide and tempestuous Atlantic. Providentially however, they reached the Western Islands withou lofing a man, and at Fayal, after encountering unex-pected difficulties, obtained a passage to Philadelbia. - Thefe last difficulties Captain Curwin states to have arisen from the treatment of a Mr Duncar Rofs, the reputed owner of the veffel in which he returned, who, regardless of every claim to conpassion arising from such uncommon sufferings, acted with cruelty, inconfittency, and injustice, towards the captain and his crew.

Philadelphia, May 12. The violence lately offered in this city to the perfon of an unfortunate woman upon the idle pretext of her being a witch, ought not, fays a correspondent, to be imputed to the force of superstition, but to the wanton cruelty of low minds. This is not an age or country in which the human understan is subject to such visionary prejudices, and what to be pardoned to the prevailing ignorance and might be pardoned to the prevailing ignorance and weakness of the middle centuries, cannot in the pre fent enlightened day admit of an extenuation.

ROM THE LONDON PAPERS, June 29 Paterfaurgh, May 8. The Empres, our im-nortal fovereign, has formed the project of cauting three large canals to be dug in different parts of the Empire; the one to unite the Winte to the Cafpian Sea, by the junction of the Southern Kilema, a river on the frontiers of the government of Permia, and the Province of Uffing, with the Northern Kikma. This work will be directed by M. de Schatelen, a Dutchman, who is a lieutenant of artillery in the Rustian service, and will cost near 500,000 roubles The fecond canal is to join the Baltic to the Caf-pian Sea by the rivers of Wytegra and Kofcha, which communicates to lake Onega and the White Lake. M. de Wit, also a Dutchman, and an officer in the artillery, will have the management of this undertaking, which will be very expensive, as it will require, 40 fluires. The third idea is to unite the Baltick to the Black Sea, by a double canal in White Russa, which will open a communica-tion between Cherson, Petersburgh, and Riga. The plans are drawn by M. d'Irossen, of Freves, a lieu-tenant-colonel of the artillery. This double capal, if it is executed, will be one of the most memorable and useful enterprises of the present reign : it will be about 200 werits long, and will cost eight millions of roubles.

Utrecht, June 21. It is with the deepeft concern that we find the States-General have admirted the Deputies from the States affembled at Amersfoort into their Affembly in preference to those from the States Affembly in this city. Thus the parriots have nothing left for it but to rely upon the courage of their armed focieties, and upon the fidelity of the legion of Salm, and those regiments which still remain on their fide.

Had the Governor of Gibraltar visited the Spanish capital in his way home, we will be bold to affirm, that his reception there would have been more diftinguished. It is with real concern we inform the public, that the present Greenland feason has proved the most disaftrous one the adventurers in that fifthery have experienced for many years. By accounts already received it appears, that fourteen thips have periffed in the ice; and there is too much reason to fear that more have been loft, of which no information has yet been obtained. To mitigare the horror with which the feeling heart must be pierced by fuch a recital, we are hap py to add, that there is the greatest reason to behave been faved.

The unfortunate event above mentioned casioned by the ships getting inclosed by the vast islands of ice which are always stoating in the Greenland feas during the fifthing feeton, but were this year more numerous and dependous than any man employed in the fiftery had ever before feen.

So inflantaneous was the deftruction of forme of the above ships, that the crews had it not in their power to make any previous arrangement for their own prefervation, the velfels being in a moment crushed to atoms; consequently the only means they had to preserve themselves from instantly peritings was seaping with that dexterity which experation only could excite, upon the mountains of ice which dealt destruction to their mips; and is that firmation waiting for relief from those who witnessed the acastrophe, without having the misfertane to share

It appears that the frigidity of the late fpring months was not confined to this ifand or the contiguous coafts, but was felt in every part of Europe. In Greenland, the feverity of the cold was nearly beyond bearing, which fufficiently accounts for the more than usual abundance of ice that rendered those feas almost unnavigable. Of the fourteen thips lot, three belong to the ort of London, named the Mary, the Generous Friends, and the Betfey; the other eleven were most of them from Hull. Two ships belonging to Newcastle, and one to Lynn, were very near experiencing the same disaffer, but fortunately escaped

On the 4th of Jule, in lat. 49 N. long. 46. 59-W. Captain Fayres of the Molley Hill, arrived at Liverpool, was torprifed by the man at the helm calling out Land when, on his coming on deck, he perceived, to his utter aftonishment, the vessel to be within (as he supposed) 200 yards of a tre-mendous tock, or island of ice, which appeared to be three times as high as the ship's top galfant mast head; the circumference as much as the ground on which the town of Liverpool flands; was grounded in 35 fathoms, and had the most rude, horrid, and ing appearance possible to be conceived, feeming to overhang the veffel, threatening to overwhelm her; the terrors of which was confiderably heightened by huge maffy fragments loofening from its top, which falling down, and firiking against its craggy sides, raised such a smoke as ascended in columns magnificently grand and awfal - On the next morning he fell in with another island of ice, but not of fo great magnitude as the former, it being not more than one third its fize; its appearance was far different; the top and fides being formed into beau-tiful plains and flops, and the fun-beams playing on is, gave it the appearance of polified filver; and which being discovered at such a distance as to create no fuspicions of danger, was viewed with great pleafure by the ship's company.

Miss Fanny's Account of the METROPOLIS and it. Suburbs, in a letter to ber Sifter Nancy in " THE journey and the entrance not with relating -Volumes of novels have been foun out to describe what can be faid in a few words, and fo I leave you to form an epitome in your own mind of that kind of minutice, which swell those pages we have so often explored. London is nothi than a large country village, where the tea tattle at the mantua-maker's, and the politics of the barbers thops, are enlarged and put into bester lan-guage, at routs in Westminster and Coffeehouses in the city. I have made myself mistress of the whole, and you shall have the account without exaggeration, conformable to truth.

First, I must inform you, that agreeable to the Countels's etiquette, my brother and I were im-mediately put apprentices - he to my Lord's Valet, and I to my Latty's Woman. I bore my fituation much better than he did -for, like his father, he is obstinate and passionate, and struck the door of the Earl's hair, such a blow - as in my opinion no-thing could warrant but the occasion; and that occalion was, Monsieur's burning Jaok's temple with a pair of toupee irons; but the Frenchman put up int, on Jack's giving him half a guinea; which donceur the other took as a matter of reciprocity, according to the true Parifian ideas of the new

I fuffered every thing patiently - The natural enamel was taken off my reeth to give them a tem-porary white—the quicks of my nails were tottured at one end, and fealped at the other, in order to render them long -my poor head was really racked, and every hair underwent as much barbarity as recruits experience from a drill ferjeant. One lock was to march; another to counter-march; a third to lay in ambuth; a fourth to form a crefcent; a fifth to lie concealed; a fixth to appear in front; a fewenth to form the rear; the eighth and ninth to fulfain the right and left wings; and a tenth to foread itself out to conceal a false battery of artificial dead hair, that covered the right and left ears, the forehead, and the corps de referve behind, which latter was, in a curved manner, twifted fornewhat like the extremities of an old cow's tail. I mult observe to you, that the whole was charged with powder—made from starch, and loaded with balls of hard and soft pomatum, which being well scented, carried death among the whole army of beaux,—an army who never saw any naked weapon but a razor, nor fmelled any other powder than

My brother and I went to pay morning villes to the Countels's acquaintance—that is, we rode in the coach with her Ladyship, to her milliner's and mercer's, during the time that her footman left her Ladyship's proxy at the done of those the was supposed to wait upon; and what do you think the proxy was ! - a little fcrap of fquare card-paper, an dred of which were not worth a penny, with her Ladyship's name written upon it. This is the mode which the nobility take in Lordon of vifiting each other and between you and I, it is not a bad one; for except between the footman and the porter at the hall-door, there is no gossiping on these occafions. It is the fame thing in the polite circle, when the dearest friend is in the most imminent danger. The footman goes in form, and leaves his mafter or his miftrefs's name upon a flate, or written on a card, and that is journalized in a which book, if the indisposed person gers the better of his illness, he perales, and then orders his foot-man to write a card of thanks to all whose names are entered. On those occasions nothing but the form of fashion is attended to, for excepting the late case of the Prince of Wales, who is really and univerfally beloved, all enquiries after death are a farce. and it is totally indifferent to the querift, whether the perion lives or dies.

The red which I had on my cheeks when I came to town, was confidered vulgar to a degree, - What has Nature to do in London? A rofe in June is a nuifance, because it comes naturally from the pure earth ; but a rose in December, raised by dung, is fragrance in high perfection. So it is with us coun-Aprille Me. k ermit the Heavens and the Earth to do their promifed dutywe are rustic; and therefore, to comply with fashion, I put on paint. Between you and I, however, this is a most barbarous attack upon youth and beauty; for when the Countels and I were painted, the look ed as young as I did, the' fhe stood godmother to our father. I complimented her Ladyship upon her looks the thanked me, but durit not finite, the enamel was so thick, and said, "Aye, my dear, you see how true the colours are." I could not help thinking on this occasion what our brother Bob fays, "The French always bang out false cocolours.

We went on Saturday to the Marchionels of ned long before the time, for it was feven o'clock before we fat down at the inviter's honfe. Indeed, I think, as every thing is merely show at the tables of the great, this mode of dining at home before you go to dine abroad, is a very good one; for it is a well-known fact, that unless it be a select pany who really intend to be happy, a fashionable dinner is the mere etiquette of fitting down to a number of oddened, and then removed before it is puffible to rodened, and then removed before it is possible to make a dioner on any; for sumething so for values in produced after the sirst dishes, that half, a dozen men in good health, and with sound appetites, would eat up all that was provided for twenty. The true standard of politeness, however, is, that the great shall taste of a number of dishes, express an approbation of all; and, in sac, swallow but a taste of each, and what he does not be reach, and what he does not be reach, and approbation of all; and, in fact, fivallow but a tarte of each; and what he does put to his mouth mult be with a fork, lot the fubfiance he ever fo watery; for if the knife goes near his lips—he is instantly fet down as unfit to circle in the polite world.

I have now, I think, faid enough for my first letters. My next shall contain forcewhat curious of what I may sruly call those unnatural beings, in the creation. I shall give you an account of their meetings, and their concerns, and their concerns. idgs, and their concerts, and their card parties, and their frange mode of paffing away time, until which, I shall on paper bid you adicu, though you ever live in my thoughts. The Court of Justiciary had fixed this day for resuming the consideration of the relevancy of the libel in the celebrated constitutional question at the linestance of Mr Cuming of Altyre, against the Rev. instance of Mr Cuming of Altyre, against the Rev.
Mr Lesie; —but all procedure therein was prevented by Mr Cuming's counsel appearing in Court, and craving, in his name, that the diet might be deserted: Upon which Mr Lessie was associated from the

On Monday last, we gave an account of some coins of Edward I. being found in digging the foundation of one of the houses, at the South Bridge, and, at same time, gave a discription of one of them. It has since been discovered, that these coins, though nearly of the fame fize, are not all of one fort, contain different inferiptions. For the gratification of the curious Antiquary, we give the legend of the following. E. ANG H. SCOTIE PROREX MONET. NOVA. Y. VE. The head is fullfaced, as in most of the rest, and appears to have been struck when Edward sook possession of Scotland during the disputes between Bruce and Baliol in the year 1291. There feems to be no mention mide of fuch a coinage in any book on this subject. It will, therefore, be obliging, if any person better informed, will communicate his sentiments to the

DEAR Tom, 'mong all the eaftern flories
Which 'Rabian Nights have laid before us,
I ne'er read one fo odd!
As that which Mr —— What's his name?
Has told, wheir hunting after fame,
Of Diogenes, o'd dad.

This fellow, if the flory's true, Of all the men I ever knew,
Was surely the most mad;
He left his wife and friends bonned in femch of housest men, I find, only about the world did gad.

Historians tell is forething more, As that he ne'er would enter door, But liv'd in an old cafe : To live in fach a place as this, Antiquity won't take't amis, Was fare a foolish take.

As you and I have done when thirity,
He faw a young man drinking whifey
From hollow of his hand;
From that time he ne'er carried cup,
As, when he bent his fingers up,
He had one at command.

All this I've read in fome old bo In which again't ne'er fhall look;
You know I feorn to flatter
But still fome doubts I entertain'd,
And now I have the bottom gain'd Of this myfferious ma

Diogenes was no fach fool,
But a good, jolly, honest foul,
Who lov'd to drink good flip;
So, when the fiquor was all gone,
He could not belt to fluy at home,
But gave his friends the flip.

In fearch of bronest men, they fay, He travell'd many a weary day, But none could ever had; The this was only meant in jeft, To throw a flur upon the reft Whom he had left behind.

There was a fea a good way diffant,
I believe it is there at this inflant,
Or formething of that fore;
Old Dio, from the colour of it,
It being red; as fome will have it,
Conjectur'd it was Port.

Twas this he fought. And now you'll alk,
Why he'd fubralt to bring his cafe.
Without a fledge or waggon?
In truth, he would have thrown't away,
But recalled flould he flay,
That he would need a flaggon

To the LANDES GENTLEMEN OF SCOTLANDS

GENTLEMEN,

THERE, doubtless, are many cross incidents in human life, which it is impossible for a man, however fagacious, to turn to his own advantage. But, that "the number of these is much finaller than is generally imagined," is a proposition capable of demonstration.

This remark will hold good, not only in our private capacity as individuals, but also in our public, as a community.

The inteffine commotions, or rather civil war, The inteffine commotions, or rather civil war, which at prefent exists in Holland, will, if it is not shortly brought to a conclusion, be sensibly selt by this country, on account of the interruption it will occasion to commerce. But the opportunity it affords us of supplanting them in many of their manufactures, will do more than counterbalance this inconvenience. The religious troubles which have taken place in France, at different periods, were of infinite service to the English and Dutch, by enabling them to establish and improve the several branches of their trade. of their trade.

All of you, Gentlemen, have remarked the inferiority of this, in respect of some other countries, in point of upulence and trade; or, if any have not made the observation of themselves, they would soon be put in mind of it; for the poverty and misery of Scotland is often call in our seeth by the citizens of Scotland is often cast in our seeth by the citizens of these more wealthy stares.

Permit me, then, Gentlemen, to exhort you at seize this favourable crisis for extending and improving the manufactures of your country. As it is only of lase that this object has been thought worth, the attention of a gentleman, many of you may be at a loss what steps to take for this putpose. This, Gentlemen, so much depends on particular circumstances, that sew rules can be given which will universally hold. A variety of encouragements and salvary regulations are necessary; and when laws are required, your concurrence will much facilitate the passing them.

There are excellent situations on many of your e-flates for carrying on different manufactures. Encourage artists to settle there. Country villages ejoy many advantages, in this respect, over overgrown towns. The one is the surfery of the industrious artisan; the other is his grave: Wages are often 20 per cent. lower in the one than the other.

Be not too anxious to introduce foreigners for this purpose, when it is possible to do without them.
Prejudice, on both sides, often hinder our people from being benefited by their instructions; and, be sides, sew sober, skilful artists will leave their native country to settle in this, without better encourages ment than an infant manufacture, on a small scale, can afford; and if they are diffolute, they are not only entirely useless, but extremely pernictious.

Your tenants are often at a loss how to dispose of their younger sons. Send such of these are most inclined that way, and least liable to be contaminated by vicious company, to proper places to be instructed, and then enable them to settle at home, by furnishing them with suitable accommodations.

The country manufacturer has much occasion for horse labour to collect his raw materials, and carry himself and his goods to market. Therefore let him have a farm, large or small, in proportion to the extent of his trade; for although he can often have tone to his trade; for although he can often have tone to his trade; for although he can often have tone to his we may add, that the farm will in point of cultivation.

own: and to this we may add, that the farm will foon be superior to the generality of those about it, in point of cultivation.

Many of you, Gentlemen, whose property lie pear large towns, may think; that the advantages resulting to your estates are much the same, whether the manusacture be carried on in your own village, or in the next market town, as two or three miles difference, in point of carriage, will be but light felt by your tenants, on the produce of their farms. But if you take the difference of rent for houses and gardens, the conveniency of having manure easy, of labourers at hand in buly seasons, &c. you will find the first method infinitely more advantageous than the latter.

the latter.

But, Gentlemen, as I fear I have already trefpaffed upon your patience, I must abruptly take leave of you at this time, by again recommending to your consideration the importance of the subject; and by assuring you, that the establishing manufactures on your citates enjoys this advantage over most other pursuits, namely, that at the time you are bestering your fortune, you are endearing yourfelf to your country.

I am, GRHTLEMEN,

Your most obedient ferrant,

FOR EXTENDING THE FISHERIES, &c. The Directors of the Brisish Society for Extending the Fisheries, and Improving the Sea coasts of the kingdom, think it incumbent upon them to give the following account of their proceedings, for the information of the Public in general, and for that of the Proprietors in particular.

A N undertaking which has for its objects, to prevent the continuation of thole frequent emigrations from Scotland to America, that operate as a pernicious drain to the internal firength of the kingdom—to enlarge the refounce of the country by an increase of fubfiltence, of appulation, and of wealth—to augment, by a wall addition to the number of the feamen, the maritime power of the empire—An undertaking to extensive and important, requires, on the part of the Directors, the most deliberate conduct, and the anost authentic local information. off authentic local information.

most authentic local information.

Under these impressions, one of their earliest measures was that of soliciting information, as well from the public at large, as from the principal inhabitants of the northern and western coasts of the Highlands, to which, as the natural seat of the Fisheries, their views are chiefly directed. In consequence of their applications, answers the most satisfactory have been returned; for at the same time that specific information has been obtained, many of those gentlemes who were particularly addressed, have offered (some of them, as a gift, and others on terms the most moderate) any pro-, and others on terms the most moderate) any pro-of their lands that may be requisite for the Society's portion of their lands that may be requifite for the Society's intended eliabilihments.

But notwithstanding the value of the local information, and the liberality of the offers, which have thus been received, the Directors have us yet determined on the settlement of only two villages, one of which vill be clubilihed in the Southern, and the other in the Northern division of the Highlands.

able concurrence in the feveral accounts of the fituations in which these settlements may be made with the greatest advantage: Tobermory in the Sound of Mull, in Angyleshire, being uniformly recommended as affording the first the first than the settlement on that part of the which these settlements may be made with the greatest advantage: Tobermory in the Sound of Mull, in Argyleshies, being uniformly recommended as affording the finest harbour on that part of the coast, but which, though much frequented, is destitute at present of any of those accommodations that the trades of a settlement supply. And all persons equally recommending, as the best situation for the Northern Settlement, the borders of one or other of the principal lakes in Ross-shire; the western coast of that county being sampus for its wonderful shoals of herrings, and for the abundance of its cod, but unprovided at present with the establishments that are requisite for the Fisheries.

Notwithstanding, however, this remarkable concurrence of testimonies in favour of the two above-mentioned situations, as institled by their present wants, and their means of suture improvement, to the Society's cartlest establishments; yet the Directors have resolved to examine for themselves, and to obtain, by personal inspection, a knowledge of the circumstances which ought to govern the commencement, and determine the course of their proceedings.

With this view, the sollowing Directors have already secolyed to wist, in the course of the present sammer, all such places on the coasts of the Highlands, as shall appear to them to merit particular examination; a business which they have chearfully undertaken, without any expense to the trust.
